Chris Packham's legal challenge appeal

Naturalist and campaigner Chris Packham launched a case to review the government's decision over HS2. This was dismissed by the High Court, however the Court of Appeal decided to hear the case on 8 July 2020. One of the key reasons Lord Justice Lewison gave for approving the hearing was the 'considerable public interest' that has been shown.

The judges reserved their ruling.

Iron Age skeleton discovered in Wendover

An Iron Age skeleton with his hands bound has been discovered by HS2 project archaeologists, who believe he may be a murder victim. The remains of the 2,000-year-old adult male were found face down at Wellwick Farm near Wendover in Buckinghamshire. Full article can be viewed here.

Keith Hoffmeister of the Chiltern Society has been photographing the HS2 route across the Colne Valley Country Park and the Chilterns for over ten years. He intends to continue with this project as construction progresses showing the impact at a number of locations. The pictures are now available in the Chiltern Society's HS2 Photo Diary. <https://chilternsociety.org.uk/hs2-photo-diary/>

The intention is that Keith will continue to update the pictures regularly. It is the only photographic record that we know of and as such will be a valuable reference source both now and in the future. With thanks to Keith for sharing.

Infrastructure and Projects Authority Annual Report

The Infrastructure and Projects Authority has just released their annual report. HS2 has fallen from a classification of Amber/Red which it has held for 7 years to Red in the latest report. A red classification means “successful delivery appears to be unachievable, and the project may need to be re-sscoped or have its overall viability reconsidered”.
